“Dependence on agriculture knows no boundaries. Urban or rural, wealthy or poor, young and old —agriculture is the lifeline that supports us all. An understanding of agriculture is important to every citizen. The economic well-being of our society is dependent on agriculture to supply an affordable, safe and abundant food supply as well as clothing and shelter, and plants, animals and natural resources for recreation, companionship and aesthetic value.”

"Governor Sonny Perdue has proclaimed March 15-21, 2009 as Georgia Agriculture Week. We encourage each of you to reflect upon the tremendous impact agriculture has on our lives. Knowledge of agriculture is important for informed consumers and for the continued economic success of our state and for environmental stewardship.”
